

AUDE Space

The new AUDE Space, located in The URA Centre 1st storey atrium, is dedicated to the promotion and appreciation of architecture and urban design in our ongoing efforts to create a distinctive city. It is a place for the cross-sharing of ideas and best practices between professionals, and where the public can learn more about how these industries improve the quality of the built environment.

The exhibition space showcases good architecture and design – in particular those by small, medium, and emerging firms – through models and other tools.

The projects profiled, demonstrate innovative ideas, techniques and materials that are sensitive to context, and also expresses finesse to details.

View our current and past exhibitors at ura.sg/aude for more insights into their design philosophies and projects.

Ongoing exhibition

Small Firms; Big Ideas (March – June 2019)

AUDE Space's inaugural exhibition displays a variety of works by eight local architecture practices. While small in size, these firms are big on good designs and creating delightful spaces. From homes to skate parks and the National Day Parade stage, these firms rethink and reimagine the design of buildings and spaces, paying close attention to details – such as lighting, scale, composition and material. Browse the collection of models, images and drawings to learn about how they make a difference through their dedication to design.

Details on the ongoing exhibition:

- Making Architecture by BHATCH Architects
Sketches, drawings and models from five projects are brought together in varying scale to thread through common themes of materiality, scale and composition. The projects are reinterpreted and crafted in various ways to create architecture that is distinctive, fresh and relevant to Singapore.
- Architectonics/Morphologies by CZARL Architects
What defines a roof, a wall or a floor? When does the threshold between these architecture elements blur and transcend beyond their perceived function? The five projects showcase attempt to explore new ways on how these elements of architecture can be reimagined, reconstructed and redefined.
- Tropical Arts And Crafts by Guz Architects Pte Ltd

Roof gardens introduce greenery to our concrete jungle, adding a different dimension to the built environment. This exhibit explores the effective use of greenery in building design and architecture, as well as how passive designs such as roof gardens integrate with the building and its surrounding environment.

- Green Rhapsody by IX Architects Pte Ltd

Curated to explore the studio's emphasis on the intertwined relationship between the natural and built environment, this exhibit outlines three broad themes – green elements, green resources and the symbiotic relationship between people and the environment.

- Innovative Pragmatism in Architecture by MU Architects

This exhibit demonstrates how design and typological innovation can help overcome challenges of limited space, such as through the creation of attractive courtyards within buildings to bring in light, air and views.

- Building Economy by Plystudio Architects Pte Ltd

This exhibit explores how designers use sketches, drawings and models to encourage critical thinking, spark ideas, and push design exploration to the next level.

- Light Transcends Scale by Solid Architects LLP

This exhibit showcases physical models made to test the spatial and lighting qualities of the firm's designs, across a variety of scales. The works showcased here include residential projects with designs to provoke, question and push limits, as well as the award-winning stage and prop design of the National Day Parade 2018.

- Simplicity, Repose & Delight by WASAA Architects & Associates

This display is curated to showcase a variety of works that personify WASAA's philosophy of crafting meaningful buildings and architecture spaces that embody qualities of simplicity, repose and delight. The works include an outdoor learning garden and a creative art space.
